1.
2. The Textile Dye Factory in Budapest employs approximately 1100 persons.
3.
4. In the Regiment, we had a 100 drop switchboard, three telephone operators and three radio operators who worked with the three radios which were located at Regimental Headquarters. Each battery had five telephone operators and two radio operators. [See Enclosure B.]
5. All ammunition for firing practice was drawn from the ammunition dump located to the east of our kaserne. [See Enclosure A.] All three regiments used this ammunition dump. USAF review completed.
6. In addition to the Hungarian installations I have already mentioned, there was a Soviet armored division equipped with T-34 tanks stationed to the north of my kaserne in Szolnok. [See Enclosure A.]

7. My Regiment and the 87mm (Quad) AAA Regiment went to the firing range located at Bicsjens [47 56N 19 02E] and the 87mm Mortar Regiment went to the firing range located at Kiskeres [46 37N 19 17E] and Nagykeres [47 02N 19 46E]. These are two small towns and the firing range is located near both towns.
8. In the event of full mobilization all of the units of my division were to be doubled in size by calling up reserve personnel who had already been assigned to specific duties in each battery. The equipment to be used by the increased force was on hand in storage.

9. While I was there I saw that across the road from the Hungarian Artillery Kaserne there was a Soviet installation. [On file is an overlay with sketch showing location of units in Szekesfehervar area.] The Soviets had armored units equipped with T-34's and also infantry units stationed at this post. I don't know what the Soviet unit designations were.

10. When the revolt started, there were Soviet infantry stationed in a kaserne north of my home. Sometime during the revolt Soviet armored troops replaced the infantry at this kaserne. They were equipped with T-34 tanks, not T-54's. After the revolt, Soviet infantry returned to the kaserne. An AVH headquarters was taken over by Soviet infantry which was still in this building when I left Budapest.
